Handle (need login) (/publications/show/328947?lang=en)

Referring as a collaborative process: learning to ground language through language games

Conference paper, reviewed

Authors Dominik Künkele | External

Simon Dobnik | Department of Philosophy, Linguistics and Theory of Science

Publication year 2023

Published in Proceedings of MariLogue - Semdial 2023: The 27th Workshop on the Semantics and Pragmatics of Dialogue

Abstract How do artificial agents based on neural networks coordinate on a new language through referential games over 3-d scenes? We extend a popular CLEVR dataset to control for different combinations of features of target and distractor objects and examine the success of referential grounding learned by the agents.

Links https://www.dobnik.net/simon/documents/2023.semdial.language-games.pdf (https://www.dobnik.net/simon/documents/2023.semdial.language-games.pdf)
https://mezzanine.um.si/en/conference/semdial-2023-marilogue/ (https://mezzanine.um.si/en/conference/semdial-2023-marilogue/)
http://www.semdial.org/ (http://www.semdial.org/)
http://semdial.org/anthology/venues/semdial/ (http://semdial.org/anthology/venues/semdial/)

Publisher University of Maribor, Faculty of Eelectrical Engineering and Computer Science

Publisher location Maribor, Slovenia

ISSN 2308-2275

Categories SOCIAL SCIENCES | Psychology | Psychology (excluding Applied Psychology) | Cognitive science
HUMANITIES | Languages and Literature | General Language Studies and Linguistics | Linguistics
NATURAL SCIENCES | Computer and Information Science | Computer Vision and Robotics (Autonomous Systems) | Image analysis
NATURAL SCIENCES | Computer and Information Science | Language Technology (Computational Linguistics) | Computational linguistics

Keywords grounding, language and vision, referring, language games, artificial agents

Language English

Publication-ID 328947